Weekly Update

The last day of Spring has finally arrived! It looks like we might get a warm Summer after all. We are supposed to be in the high 80's and low 90's later this week and weekend.

We had a fun Night Golf event Saturday evening with plenty of people turning out to play. Mother Nature kept it interesting and it rained on us, but it didn't dampen the spirits of the Golfers.

We are only 2 weeks away from the 4th of July, with the Firework show on Saturday the 2nd.

See you soon,

Golfers,

Superintendent's Corner

June 21st, the summer solstice and the longest day of the year, is upon us. This marks the time where the sun reaches its furthest point in the North for sunset and sunrise. It also acts as the first day of summer. With any luck this spring-time weather pattern will also transition into the summer-time weather that we all enjoy here at Crescent Bar. Last week my weather app was calling for the rest of June to barely reach into the 80s. Not much has changed but it now looks like we could see slightly higher temperatures than previously predicted. It may not be ideal boating weather, but it sure is great for golfing!

Our first night golf event of the year was a hoot. You may notice that some tee boxes have a few extra divots taken out, but fortunately these are on a schedule of divot-fill every Wednesday, so they should bounce back in no time. If you happened to have missed this first event, be sure to sign up for our next night golf in July. It's a golfing experience like no other. Contact the pro-shop for details.

Thank you and enjoy the course!
