Superintendent's Corner

Dear members,

This past weekend gave us some great weather for golfing. It's exciting to see some of you have already played a handful of rounds. The greens have yet to be watered or mowed but are showing promising signs of health so far and are running anywhere from a 6 to a 7 for speed. Today (Monday) looks to be the warmest day of the week, with the coldest day being Wednesday. Remember that the course is closed for play until air temperatures are above 40 degrees.

Throughout this week, and the next, we will be tackling some much-needed edging of bunkers and tee boxes and in the weeks following we will be installing some edging stones around cart paths and other areas where turf meets gravel or asphalt. These activities shouldn't hinder play but remember to be thoughtful of our crew and their safety. From this point forward you can expect pin locations to be changed every Monday and Friday morning with only a few exceptions, such as tournaments and night golf. It's still early season for golfing but our crew is in full swing, working to bring this course to life and make improvements everywhere that we can. In case you have missed it, there are a few eagles hanging around the course. A couple bald eagles and even some golden eagles have made this area their home over the winter months, but I expect that they'll be heading for the mountains before long, so look for them while you still can and enjoy your time on the course. Thank you.
